

Paris/Vienna, November 2017

Embargo on Qatar: Manageable for the time being, but not perennially

On June 5 2017, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Egypt and Bahrain (known as the quartet) announced they were breaking diplomatic ties with Qatar, due to the country's relations with Iran and accusations that it supports extremism. Although the embargo has had some impact on Qatar, the country has so far been able to soften the effects of the crisis. The biggest threat to the Qatari economy would be if this crisis is prolonged for more than a few months.

Situation under control thanks to government support

Qatar, the world's largest exporter of liquefied natural gas, has been able to soften the effects of the embargo so far, mainly thanks to its reserves of cash and gold. The government has taken immediate and effective measures, which - along with rising energy exports - have been able to mitigate the challenges arising from the crisis. Coface expects the Qatari economy to grow by 3.4% in 2017 and by 3% in 2018.

Support from the government, mainly in the form of depositing of billions of dollars into the local banking systems to sustain liquidity, has so far helped the Qatari economy to deal with the negative impacts of the crisis, even though Gulf residents have started to withdraw their deposits. Another measure has been to reorganise supply chains, in cooperation with other regional and international partners, such as Turkey. Meanwhile, Qatar's hydrocarbon exports are continuing to soar. During the first half of 2017, Qatar's natural gas exports rose by 19.3% from a year earlier, while its oil exports jumped by 31.6% during the same period.

Resilience of national banking system

Public deposits remain a key source of funding for Qatari banks. The share of public deposits in all customer deposits rose to 38% in August, up from 32% in June, as the government pumped money into the banking system to offset the decline in external funding. Funding from the Qatar Central Bank (QCB) to commercial banks is also playing an important role in sustaining liquidity in the banking system. Over the upcoming period, despite persistent outflows due to the unsolved diplomatic crisis, the asset quality of the Qatari banking system will remain high as banks are backed by the government's immense capital buffers, which maintain liquidity at comfortable levels.

Challenges could arise in the medium term if no rapid solution to the crisis is found

If it takes longer than a few months for the parties involved to reach a resolution, Qatar's import costs will escalate further. This would impede growth in several key-sectors, such as construction, where prices would be pushed up due to the higher costs of building materials. This would dampen the country's growth performance, despite interventions from the government to reduce financial and fiscal risks. Furthermore, this continued political uncertainty would drag down investments, particularly in non-hydrocarbon sectors. This, combined with tighter monetary policy (due to the currency peg to the US dollar) and lower public support, would moderate the growth of non-hydrocarbon sectors.

The banking system would also be affected by weaker economic conditions, lower investor sentiment and deposit outflows, making it important to monitor the liquidity of the Qatari banking system.

In summary, any further deterioration in the current situation would result in greater costs to the Qatari economy. These negative impacts could be mitigated if energy prices continue to recover. Expansion in the construction sector and further infrastructure projects would also sustain momentum in other manufacturing activities. These developments would support growth in non-hydrocarbon sectors.

MEDIA CONTACT

Verena SCHWARZ - T. +43 (0)1 515 54-540 verena.schwarz@coface.com

About Coface

Coface, a world-leading credit insurer, offers 50,000 companies around the globe solutions to protect them against the risk of financial default of their clients, both on their domestic and export markets. The Group, which aims to be the most agile global credit insurer in the industry, is present in 100 countries, employs 4,300 people and posted consolidated turnover of €1.411 billion in 2016. Coface publishes quarterly country and sector risk assessments, based on its unique knowledge of companies' payment behavior and on the expertise of its 660 underwriters and credit analysts located close to clients and their debtors.

www.coface.com

COFACE SA. is listed on Euronext Paris – Compartment B
ISIN: FR0010667147 / Ticker: COFA

